

Call for Papers:
1st Official Symposium of the ICTM Study Group on GLOBAL HISTORY OF MUSIC
16-18 November, 2020

The Global History of Music ICTM Study Group welcomes participants interested in the historical global interaction of regional musical cultures and scholarships in the attempt to contribute to work currently underway in both musicology and ethnomusicology reaching beyond Euro- and America-centric approaches. We aim to encourage, promote and support scholars and performers investigating music history in a global context.

We are pleased to invite participation in our 1st International Symposium,

“Mobility and Transcultural in Music and Performance in Global Civilisations,” hosted by the Sichuan Conservatory of Music, People’s Republic of China, between 16 and 18 November 2020. Sichuan Conservatory of Music (SCCM) is located inside the city of Chengdu, one of the three most-populous cities in Western China and known for its scenic beauty, rich cultural relics, and its globally acclaimed food. Located in the heart of Sichuan Province and serving as its capital city, it is surrounded by the Chengdu Plain, known as the "Country of Heaven" and the "Land of Abundance.”

Migration and trade have fostered intercultural networks through time and space. Performing arts including music, dance, poetry, and theatre have travelled along and through these networks, presenting and representing their cultures of origin while adapting to or adopting local practice in their travels. Transcultural speaks to the inter-subjective view developed through an understanding of convivial exchange and reciprocal culture-related histories. Performance practice is ideal for transcultural study as it can reinforce, reflect, change, challenge, preserve or reciprocate culture and knowledge as it encounters other practices and cultures.

We invite papers and presentations engaging with the topic of mobility and transcultural in music and related performance broadly or through three conference sub-themes.

- Isolation, Collaboration, Adaptation: Performance practices along and beyond the regions of the Great Silk Road.

While the Great Silk Road was indeed a web of travellers fostering millennia of encounters, it may also be understood as a symbol of similar networks elsewhere. Whether productive or protective, collaborative or combative, adaptive or isolationist, how have such encounters affected past and present performance practices?

- Economic perspectives of musical change and exchange: the role of trade in music history of global civilisations.

Since time immemorial, trade in goods, services, people, and resources has fostered movement and reciprocity between peoples. Music in all its manifestations, has accompanied local and global trade, affecting and being affected by economic interests. What are ways in which trade and economic exchange have played a role in music history, and how can those influences be heard in contemporary practice?

- Music, Dance, Drama, and Puppetry: Inclusive performance practices and their histories

In many cultures of the world, music is rarely performed in isolation, but rather is an integrated part of practices that include dance, drama, puppetry and more. To focus only on music can often be to exclude what may be truly valuable, yet to cast too broad net may lead to confusion. Which performance practices should be included in globally situated research, and what might their inclusion teach us about music history approaches and discourses?

Please submit abstracts for paper presentations, round tables, panels or alternative presentations such as lecture-performances to ictm_ghom@163.com by 1 April 2020.

Abstracts should be in English and a maximum of 250 words. Please include your full name, institution (if applicable), position/rank, and email.

Deadline for Abstracts submission: 1 April 2020.

Declaration of Accepted Abstracts: 1 June 2020

Announcement of the Symposium Program: 1 August 2020

We look forward to hearing from you and hopefully seeing you in People's Republic of China in 2020!

Razia Sultanova

Study Group Chair